

TECHNICAL THINKING IN ENGLISH CLASSES AS A PSYCHOLOGICAL AND METHODOLOGICAL PROBLEM

Shakhida Yusupova

Senior lecturer, Bukhara Engineering-Technological Institute, Bukhara, UZBEKISTAN

E-mail address: shaxidkayusupova@mail.ru

ABSTRACT

The article deals with the features of technical thinking in English classes as a psychological problem. Nowadays, one of the topical problems is to educate students in productive thinking, to evaluate their ideas and to analyze the current rapidly developing technical education. At the same time, thinking skills and English language have been important in education of highly qualified specialists.

Keywords: Technical thinking, methodology, psychology, communication, speech, modern education, development, socio-political.