

THE SOCIAL FACTORS IN TEACHING FOREIGN LANGUAGE PRONUNCIATION

Teachers, SamSIFL, Rustamova Adash Eshankulovna, Sidikova Nasiba Narzullayevna
Qudratova Dilnora Ravshan qizi

ABSTRACT

There are a lot of factors that might contribute to experiencing problems in speech production, such as age, accent, personality, social environment and instruction. Individual variation is a feature of SLA and should thus be taken into account when talking about L2 phonology acquisition. This study will take special interest in how social factors might affect speech production, because it seems to be very influential.

Keywords: Intelligible pronunciation, intonation, "lower class", "Cinderella of language teaching", ethnolinguistic community, exchange networks, Social embarrassment and frustration, English language networks.