ABSTRACT

Social insurance is a big policy for employees, to ensure the lives of workers and the goals of the social security system. The study uses descriptive statistical methods to analyze the situation of implementing social insurance policies in Thai Nguyen province. The results of the research show that recent changes in social insurance policies have helped employees improve their accessibility to the benefits that it brings. Employees have a deeper understanding of social insurance policies through multi-dimensional information channels, thereby increasing the rate of participation in social insurance in or feeling more satisfied with the service spirit of the staff of the social insurance industry.
